

I greatly enjoy my satellite radio! I object to the commercials and adds stating that it is a horrible service. You never hear anyone on satellite radio complaining about how bad FM Radio is. Hearing these commercials on FM radio has made it to where I do not listen to the local stations at all. I live in a small town so my local weather and traffic report is not available however I do travel to Dallas and Houston pretty often and enjoy the availability of turning directly to a station that is devoted to just that. You can't get that kind of update from an FM station without waiting through commercials and lengthy songs. This is a service that I pay for monthly and therefore I as a customer should be able to pick what I want to have in my service. Satellite TV now offers local stations in many areas therefore why shouldn't Satellite radio have that same advantage? If someone wants to lobby against a product that is fine however a line of decency was crossed when the ads started in with implying that those who subscribe to a satellite radio were stupid. FM radio can not compare to the digital quality or the availability of listening to the same station while traveling. Before I had the availability of having XM Radio I spent most of my time changing stations just looking for one that was not playing a commercial. Not only was this a hassle but it was also unsafe. The bottom line is that I choose to pay for a service that no one should be able to take away.
